THE VOWS OF MEN.

Write on the sand when the tide is low, Seek the spot when the waters flow; Whisper a name when the storm is heard, Pause that the echo may catch the word; If that you write on the sand should last, If echo is heard 'mid the tempests' blast, Then believe, and not till then, That there's truth in the vows of men.

Throw a rose on the stream of morn. Watch at eve for the flower's return; Drop in the ocean a golden grain, Hope 'twill shine on the shore again; If the rose you again behold, If you gaze on your grain of gold. I hen believe, and not till then, There is truth in the vows of men.

THE RUSH FOR OFFICE.—There appears to be trouble among the new party in Baltimore, notwithstanding the many protestations to the contrary. The Baltimere American, favorable to the new city administration, says:

"There is quite an interesting time now-adays at the City Hall, preparatory to the making up of the green bag of the Mayor for the presentation at the annual session of the City Council. In his inaugural address the present chief magistrate announced in plain language his determination to be Mayor of the city, clearly indicating that he should be governed by his own judgment in the matters Just pertaining to his office. Notwithstanding this sale by definite expression it seems that some of his dec 19-eost friends have an idea that he should listen to TEA, COFFEE, &c. and obey their instructions, especially with 125 packages fresh Tea regard to the appointment of officers. In several cases a single person has presented from a dozen to twenty names, upon the favorable consideration of which the Mayor was requested to pledge himself without any definite knowledge as to who the parties were, or their fitness for the places sought for them. A few days since one of these wholesale lists was presented to the Mayor and the pledge of favor required, which, as in every other instance he refused to give. This refusal gave dissatisfaction and led to complaint on the part of the party presenting the names, but he was at once given to understand that Samuel Hinks was Mayor of the city of Baltimore and should act as such. By this independent course of action the Mayor has won for himself troops of friends, and though he has thus made several opponents in the City Council a large majority of the members highly approve his course, and will sustain his appointments when they are sent before the Council in con-

A PROMISING FAMILY - THE PRINTER'S CRAFT LOOKING UP .- Israel Washburn, Jr., of the Bangor, Me., district; E. B. Washburn, of the Galena, Ill., district; C. C. Washburn, of the Mineral Point, Wis, district-these three brothers will be in Congress together next session. One from his native place in the "down east state," and the others from their adopted homes in the West. There is another another brother in California who promises well, and it is not unlikely that he will join the other three before the lapse of many years. How many more there are of the family who will make themselves known in the world, we are not advised. Printers have a professional pride in the honors achieved by this family of statesmen They are all members of the craft -printers by trade. The representative from this district, in the excitement of politics, has not forgotten how to use the "stick and rule." While on a visit here during a previous canvas, he gave "our boys" an illustration of his familiarity with type. Of course he is their candidate for the next Presidency. We hope
